What's the Buzz About?

Introducing the all-new tinnitus solution from AGX

Tinnitus, or “ringing in the ears,” afflicts millions of Americans with debilitating levels of perceived buzzing, hissing, or pulsing sounds—creating an inescapable drone in the sufferers’ ears. For our patients who struggle with tinnitus, we are excited to announce the arrival of a new treatment option from AGX Hearing that stands not only to help alleviate tinnitus symptoms but also to address the hearing difficulties that often accompany the condition.

The new AGX tinnitus solution, however, delivers two treatment solutions at once in a comfortable, nearly invisible hearing device: tinnitus therapy plus hearing aid. The AGX tinnitus solution uses the patent-pending Multiflex Tinnitus Technology to help both conceal the symptoms of tinnitus with customizable, low-volume sound stimulus and compensate for any hearing loss that may contribute to the condition.

You can try this innovative new solution—risk-free!

Our AudigyCertified™ hearing care experts have recently begun fitting this new technology and have seen promising results from patients who have reported achieving a new level of relief from their tinnitus. We look forward to hearing more from our patients about the success they are experiencing with these new devices during their 75-day risk-free trial.

Experience a comfortable and convenient new way of finding relief from your tinnitus. Find out how our experienced hearing care providers and state-of-the-art tinnitus care can help improve your quality of life today!

How do hearing aids help with tinnitus?

Of those affected by tinnitus, 85% also suffer from measurable hearing loss. Hearing aids have proven effective in the past for the treatment of tinnitus. If hearing loss is experienced in the same frequency range as the tinnitus, the logic goes, often restoring hearing within that range of sound can help to mask the tinnitus. Alternatively, some patients have found a measure of relief in sound-masking devices that attempt to conceal the tinnitus with low-volume background noise.

It's a Family Affair

Make the most of your time together this holiday season by ensuring that you're hearing your absolute best. If it's been a while since you've had your hearing checked, call our office to make sure your hearing needs are being fully met by your hearing aids. In addition, check out the following tips to make sure you don't miss a moment of your time together with your family!

Quick Tips for Better Holiday Hearing

Attending a family gathering or dinner? Ask to be seated where you'll hear your best.

Don't hesitate to remind your loved ones about your hearing difficulty. Odds are, they'll be more than happy to slow down and speak up in conversations.

Are you traveling? Do you have an extra set of devices? A cleaning kit? Bring them along, just in case.

Relax and have fun. The holidays come once a year. Enjoy them with the ones you love!

Our patients tell us

time and time again that the most life-altering and inspiring change that comes with achieving better hearing is rediscovering the personal connections that are missing from their lives.

It's these familiar and essential sounds—the voices of our children, grandchildren, spouses, and loved ones—that ground and comfort us. Our passion is creating the better-hearing solutions that keep the people and things you love close to you.

That's why we always recommend you bring a loved one with you for every hearing consultation or technology-upgrade appointment. They play a key role in helping you achieve better hearing. Their voice is a familiar sound that you can focus on, which helps us fine-tune your technology, and they offer a unique perspective on your hearing loss. After all, they've been experiencing it right along with you. Because hearing loss happens gradually, your companion will likely notice specific listening situations that appear to be a struggle for you that you may not even have been aware of.

If you find that you need additional help hearing among all the commotion of crowded holiday gatherings, ask about our streaming systems that incorporate a personal, wireless microphone that can be worn by your companion. These systems allow you to receive a clear, wireless signal from individual voices in the room, letting you communicate more comfortably, and without missing a moment of the holiday fun.

We'd Love to See You!

With the holidays already upon us, we know that you will want to focus on the fellowship, conversations, and special moments of the season—not on the condition of your technology. If you haven't already made an appointment for a clean and check of your devices, we encourage you to do so. It's amazing what a little extra care from an AudigyCertified™ professional can do to enhance your listening experience.
